BAB I

PENDAHULUAN

1.1 Latar Belakang Kegiatan

Guru dan dosen memiliki fungsi, peran, dan kedudukan yang sangat strategis dalam pembangunan nasional dalam bidang pendidikan. Namun, dalam konteks pendidikan tinggi, dosen wajib memiliki kualifikasi akademik, kompetensi, sertifikat pendidik, sehat jasmani dan rohani, dan memenuhi kualifikasi lain. Hal tersebut telah diatur dalam undang-undang Republik Indonesia Nomor 14 Tahun 2005 pasal 45. Selanjutnya, pada pasal 46 ayat 1 menyebutkan bahwa kualifikasi akademik minimum dosen adalah lulusan program magister untuk program sarjana dan lulusan program Doktor untuk program pascasarjana. Dalam melaksanakan tugasnya, dosen berhak dan wajib memperoleh kesempatan untuk meningkatkan kompetensi, akses sumber belajar, informasi, sarana dan prasarana pembelajaran, serta penelitian dan pengabdian kepada masyarakat (Pasal 51 ayat 1 poin d). Bahkan seorang dosen yang sudah memiliki jabatan akademik tertinggi pun juga tetap perlu adanya penyegaran kembali (recharging).

Langkah percepatan dalam peningkatan kualifikasi dosen perguruan tinggi Indonesia telah dilaksanakan oleh Direktorat Jenderal Sumber Daya Ilmu Pengetahuan, Teknologi dan Pendidikan Tinggi. Salah satu program yang telah dilaksanakan setiap tahunnya adalah program beasiswa pendidikan S2 dan S3 ke luar negeri dan dalam negeri. Khusus mahasiswa S3 yang berstatus dosen di lingkungan Kemenristekdikti pada pascasarjana di dalam negeri diberi kesempatan oleh Direktorat Jenderal Sumber Daya Ilmu Pengetahuan, Teknologi dan Pendidikan Tinggi untuk melakukan magang pada perguruan tinggi atau institusi riset di luar negeri. Program tersebut dinamakan dengan Program Beasiswa Peningkatan Kualitas Publikasi Internasional (PKPI)/Sandwich like. Adapun tujuan dari program tersebut yakni meningkatkan kualitas lulusan yang berwawasan global dan berdaya saing internasional, khususnya publikasi pada artikel ilmiah pereputasi seperti jurnal dengan penindeks Scopus. Pada dasarnya kualitas lulusan S3 sudah diatur dalam peraturan Presiden nomor 8 tahun 2012 tentan Kerangka Kualifikasi Nasional Indonesia (KKNI). Peraturan tersebut menyatakan bahwa learning outcomes untuk lulusan S3 adalah mampu mengembangkan pengetahuan, teknologi, dan/atau seni baru di dalam bidang keilmuannya atau praktek profesional melalui riset, hingga menghasilkan karya kreatif, original dan teruji; mampu memecahkan permasalahan ilmu pengetahuan, teknologi dan atau seni di dalam bidang keilmuannya melalui pendekatan inter, multi dan transdisipliner; dan mampu mengelola, memimpin, dan mengembangkan riset dan pengembangan yang bermanfaat bagi ilmu pengetahuan dan kemaslahatan umat manusia, serta mampu mendapat pengakuan nasional dan internasional.

Melalui program PKPI/Sandwich like tersebut diharapkan mahasiswa S3 semenjak studi pada pascasarjana sudah memiliki artikel yang dipublikasikan pada jurnal internasional yang berkualitas, bereputasi dan berdampak faktor tinggi. Sehingga mereka mampu mendapatkan pengakuan akademik berstandar internasional. Selain itu, publikasi karya ilmiah baik pada jurnal ilmiah nasional maupun internasional juga memang menjadi suatu kebutuhan yang tidak terpisahkan dari kegiatan Tri Dharma (Permen PAN-RB Nomor 17 Tahun 2013).

Penulis yang merupakan mahasiswa Program Studi S3 Ilmu Sastra pada Fakultas Ilmu Budaya, Universitas Padjadjaran, Alhamdulilah menjadi salah satu penerima beasiswa PKPI/Sandwich-like tersebut. Sebagai mahasiswa di Universitas Padjadjaran, salah satu syarat mengikuti Seminar Hasil Riset (SHR) ataupun sidang tertutup yakni harus memiliki sebuah artikel yang dipublikasikan pada jurnal ilmiah internasional terindeks Scopus. Oleh karena itu, program ini dipandang sangat mendukung sekali dalam proses penyelesaian pendidikan yang sedang ditempuh oleh penulis. Hal ini dikarenakan seperti yang telah dijelaskan di atas bahwa fokus utama dalam program beasiswa ini adalah research mentorship. Kegiatan dimana penulis mendapatkan pembimbingan langsung dari mentor perguruan tinggi luar negeri yakni bagaimana menulis artikel ilmiah internasional bereputasi yang baik. Tentunya hal ini sejalan dengan apa yang sedang dihadapi penulis. Selain dari itu, penulis juga mendapatkan pengalaman yang luar biasa baik pada bidang akademik maupun non- akademik.

1.2 Tujuan Kegitaan

Berdasarkan latar belakang yang telah dijelaskan pada bab I di atas, tujuan dari kegiatan beasiswa PKPI/Sandwich-like ini adalah :

1. Melakukan penulisan artikel ilmiah dengan bimbingan mentor di luar negeri untuk tujuan publikasi pada jurnal internasional bereputasi yang terindeks Scopus;
2. Terpublikasinya karya ilmiah dalam jurnal internasional bereputasi pada Scopus sebagai pengindeksnya dengan menggandeng pembimbing/mentor di perguruan tinggi luar negeri.
3. Mendapatkan penguatan bukan saja pada literature review namun juga pada metode dan teknik penelitian khususnya pengambilan data, analisis data dan penyajian data.
4. Mendapatkan izin akses informasi seperti referensi, koleksi jurnal dan izin akses menggunakan seluruh fasilitas yang ada pada Northern Illinois University.
5. Mengikuti perkuliahan pada kelas Academic Writing.
6. Melaksanakan desiminasi hasil diskusi dengan mentor pada seminar akhir di NIU.
7. Menjalin komunikasi dan kerjasama di bidang ilmiah di tingkat internasional (antar universitas).
8. Menambah pengalaman dan wawasan internasional baik pada publikasi internasional maupun pada bidang akademik lainnya.
9. Mendorong setiap perguruan tinggi negeri maupun swasta untuk mampu berkontribusi di jenjang internasional, the World Class University (WCU).

1.3 Manfaat Kegiatan

Latar belakang kegiatan dan juga tujuan kegiatan yang sudah dijelaskan sebelumnya diharapkan akan memberikan manfaat yang signifikan yaitu sebagai berikut:

1. Memiliki artikel atau paper yang berkualitas yang dapat diterbitkan pada jurnal internasional dengan Scopus sebagai pengindeksnya.

2. Manuskript artikel ilmiah yang diterima dan terbit di salah satu jurnal internasional bereputasi dan terindeks Scopus.
3. Penelitian dan publikasi karya ilmiah internasional bersama mentor luar negeri.
4. Memberikan kontribusi baik kuantitas maupun kualitas jurnal internasional pada perguruan tinggi tempat penulis menempuh pendidikan S3, yaitu Universitas Padjadjaran.
5. Terbangunnya network dengan dosen dan mentor bertaraf internasional dari Northern Illinois University.
6. Adanya penguatan pada literature review, metode, dan teknik penelitian.
7. Mendapatkan banyak informasi dan data yang dapat digunakan dalam penyelesaian disertasi.
8. Merasakan dan memahami kehidupan akademik kampus di Luar negeri yang sekiranya dapat diterapkan di kampus dalam negeri, khususnya Universitas Teknokrat Indonesia.
9. Memperoleh pengalaman lintas budaya (cross-culture) yang dapat dijadikan bekal saat penulis mengajar di kelas bahasa Inggris.
10. Memperoleh pengalaman secara langsung dalam mempraktekkan dan meningkatkan kemampuan bahasa Inggris dengan penutur asli (native speaker).

BAB III

PELAKSANAAN KEGIATAN

3.1 Tahap Persiapan Kegiatan

Ada beberapa tahapan yang dilalui penulis dalam persiapan kegiatan mengikuti program beasiswa PKPI/Sandwich-like 2019. Tahapan-tahapan tersebut adalah sebagai berikut:

1. Informasi PKPI 2019: Setelah penulis mendapatkan informasi dan panduan PKPI/Sandwich –like 2019 pada tanggal 20 Mei 2019, penulis segera mempersiapkan hal –hal yang disyaratkan oleh calon penerima beasiswa PKPI untuk tahun 2019. Adapun syarat-syarat tersebut diantaranya draft artikel publikasi, Surat rekomendasi dan juga surat ijin dari perguruan tinggi tempat penulis sedang melanjutkan studi, bukti kemampuan berbahasa Inggris setara IELTS minimal 5.5 atau (TOEFL ITP), surat keterangan lulus ujian, surat penerimaan (letter of acceptance (LoA)), calon supervisor/mentor di perguruan tinggi riset luar negeri, resume rekam jejak akademik calon pembimbing, dan surat keterangan lulus ujian proposal.
2. Pendaftaran Daring (online): Penulis kemudian mendaftarkan diri secara daring (online) melalui laman <http://beasiswa.ristekdikti.go.id/pkpi> pada tanggal 10 s.d 20 Juni 2019.
3. Panggilan Wawancara: Pada tanggal 23 Juli 2019 penulis mendapatkan informasi jika dipanggil untuk mengikuti seleksi tatap muka (wawancara) beasiswa PKPI 2019. Proses wawancara dilaksanakan di Luxton Hotel, Jl. Ir. Juanda No.18, Bandung, Jawa Barat. Pada tahap ini, peserta diminta untuk membawa beberapa dokumen diantaranya, Form EIP (Enhanching International Publication Program), LoA, Salinan sertifikat kemampuan bahasa Inggris, surat keterangan lulus ujian, usulan kegiatan PKPI, draft artikel publikasi, resume rekam jejak akademik calon pembimbing, dan bukti komunikasi dengan calon promotor di Luar Negeri.
4. Pengumuman Hasil Wawancara: Berdasarkan hasil seleksi wawancara, pada tanggal 23 Agustus 2019, Alhamdulillah penulis dinyatakan lolos dan diundang mengikuti tahapan seleksi selanjutnya, yaitu lokakarya pra-keberangkatan ke luar negeri yang wajib diikuti. Lokakarya ini dilaksanakan di Aston Pasteur Jl. Dr. Djunjunan No.162, Sukagalih, Kec. Sukajadi, Kota Bandung Tahun 2019. Dalam lokakarya tersebut peserta diminta melengkapi berkas dengan membawa surat izin melaksanakan kegiatan PKPI dari direktur program atau dekan sekolah pascasarjana, kemudian Letter of Acceptance (LoA) yang mencantumkan tanggal mulai dan berakhirnya program kepada instruktur Pra -Keberangkatan untuk menjadi acuan pembaiayaan pelaksanaan PKPI 2019, daftra riwayat hidup, fotokopi Kartu Tanda Penduduk, Pasfoto ukuran 4x6, rencana keberangkatan, dan surat perjanjian.

5. Pengurusan Paspor dan J-1 Visa: Persiapan selanjutnya setelah mengikuti rangkaian kegiatan pra-keberangkatan ke luar negeri, yaitu pengurusan paspor dan visa. Dalam hal paspor, penulis tidak menemukan kesulitan sedikitpun, namun untuk mendapatkan Visa Amerika Serikat penulis mengalami kendala yang berhubungan dengan persyaratan yang perlu dibawa saat wawancara di Konsulat US diantaranya surat eligibilitas atau form DS-2019, SEVIS, dan surat persetujuan Perjalanan Dinas Luar Negeri yang dikeluarkan oleh Sekretaris Kementerian Sekretariat Negara. Hal itu terjadi dikarenakan untuk mendapatkan persyaratan itu dibutuhkan waktu yang agak lama dan saling terkait. Oleh karena itu tanggal keberangkatan mundur dari awal yang direncanakan. Rencana awal untuk keberangkatan yaitu tanggal 17 September 2019 menjadi tanggal 15 Oktober 2019.
6. Wawancara via Skype/AudioWhatsapp: untuk mendapatkan form DS-2019 yang digunakan untuk keperluan wawancara di Konsulat Amerika, penulis harus melalui proses wawancara dengan direktur English as Second Language (ESL) Center, yaitu Dieter Zeschke, M.A.
7. Wawancara VISA US: Setelah penulis mendapatkan Form DS-2019 dari pihak kantor Internasional (International office) NIU, penulis langsung membuat janji temu wawancara untuk mendapatkan J1-Visa. Alhamdulillah, penulis dapat melaksanakan proses interview dengan baik pada tanggal 3 Oktober 2019 Jam 10 pagi. Berikut adalah surat konfirmasi janji temu yang dikirim pihak Konjen USA di Jakarta.

3.2 Tahap Pelaksanaan Kegiatan

Kegiatan penulis selama di Northern Illinois University berlangsung mulai tanggal 15 Oktober 2019 hingga 30 Desember 2019. Pada pelaksanaan kegiatan, ada beberapa tahapan yang telah dilalui penulis diantaranya kedatangan dan proses registrasi, acara pembukaan (opening ceremony), orientasi kampus, dan kegiatan rutin. Berikut penjelasan lebih detailnya:

1. Kedatangan dan Proses Registrasi

Sesampai di bandara O'Hare Chicago, penulis dan peserta PKPI/Sandwich-like 2019 lainnya di sambut dan dijemput oleh ibu Sinta Febrina, M.A. Ia adalah PIC (Person in Charge) untuk program PKPI di NIU. Kami langsung diantar ke tempat tinggal selama program yakni di NIU residence Hall untuk proses registrasi di DeKalb, Illinois yang terletak tidak jauh dari kampus NIU. Untuk menempuh tempat tersebut, kami membutuhkan waktu sekitar 1 jam perjalanan. Di DeKalb, penulis dan peserta PKPI 2019 lainnya tinggal di salah satu gedung apartemen yang diberi nama Stevenson Residence Hall.

Gambar 3.2 Peserta PKPI (penulis, sebelah kanan & kiri, peserta PKPI lainnya di Stevenson Residence Hall)

Setelah menyelesaikan proses registrasi, penulis dan peserta PKPI lainnya kemudian diantar untuk menuju kamar dan juga dijelaskan peraturan dan fasilitas-fasilitas yang didapatkan penulis selama tinggal di asrama. Setelah selesai dengan proses registrasi dan juga pengenalan asrama, Ibu Sinta kemudian membawa penulis dan peserta PKPI lainnya menuju kantor CSEAS (Center of South East Asian Studies) NIU.

CSEAS (Center of South East Asian Studies) merupakan sebuah pusat kajian untuk wilayah Asia Tenggara yang berasosiasi di NIU. Ada lima bahasa yang ditawarkan dari wilayah tersebut diantaranya Burnese (bahasa Myanmar), Indonesia (bahasa Indonesia), Khmer (bahasa Kamboja), Tagalog (bahasa Filipina) dan Thai (bahasa Thailand). Di kantor CSEAS memiliki empat program unggulan untuk Excange Program. Program tersebut yaitu Young Southeast Asian Leaders Initiative (YSEALI), Southeast Asia Youth Leadership Program (SEAYLP), Philippine Youth Leadership Program (PYLP), dan Indonesia Peningkatan Kualitas Publikasi Internasioanl (PKPI). Di kantor CSEAS itulah, segala keperluan penulis dan peserta PKPI 2019 difasilitasi baik untuk urusan akademik maupun non-akademik, misalnya administrasi, apartemen peserta, pembuatan kartu visiting scholar, courtesy card, one card, kegiatan seminar, keperluan peserta di apartmen seperti selimut, jaket penghangat, sepatu dan lain sebagainya. Keesokan harinya penulis diantar untuk lapor diri ke International Office NIU, untuk bertemu dengan direktur pelayanan mahasiswa internasional, Stephanie Brown untuk mendapatkan form I-94 sebagai bukti telah memasuki zona negara Amerika Serikat.

2. Acara Pembukaan PKPI 2019 (Welcoming Ceremony)

Seminggu setelah kedatangan peserta PKPI 2019 di NIU, acara pembukaan Program pkpi/Sandwich-like 2019 dilaksanakan. Acara ini dilaksanakan pada tanggal 23 Oktober 2019. Dr. Eric Jones selaku acting Director dari CSEAS membuka acara tersebut. Acara pembukaan juga dihadiri oleh Dr. David Ballantine menggantikan Judy Ledgerwood selaku Acting Dean for College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, NIU. Selain itu, sambutan dari perwakilan mentor disampaikan oleh Associate Prof. Doris Macdonald dan juga perwakilan dari KBRI yang diwakili oleh Ibu Miranda Ekawaty Mukhlis. Acara tersebut bertujuan sebagai tanda penerimaan pihak NIU untuk pelaksanaan program beasiswa PKPI/Sandwich-like 2019.

3. Orientasi Kampus

Orientasi kampus merupakan masa perkenalan untuk mengetahui tempat-tempat yang berhubungan dengan pelaksanaan kegiatan PKPI seperti Kantor urusan internasional (international office), perpustakaan, pusat bahasa (language center), writing center, bookstore, dan jalur transportasi kampus, restoran, dan pusat pertokoan. Selain itu kegiatan ini juga bertujuan untuk pengurusan kartu one card, courtesy card, dan visiting scholar card yang digunakan peserta PKPI untuk layanan dikampus seperti fotokopi, print, laundry, pinjam buku, dan lain sebagainya. Terakhir, pengurusan asuransi kesehatan juga dilaksanakan dalam kegiatan orientasi kampus ini.

4. Kegiatan Rutin

Berikut adalah kegiatan-kegiatan rutin yang penulis lakukan sesuai dengan tujuan dari program beasiswa PKPI/Sandwich-like 2019.

a. Research Mentorship

Pelaksaaan mentoring artikel ilmiah dilaksanakan berdasarkan jadwal yang telah disepakati bersama antara penulis dengan mentor. Tempat pelaksanaan mentoring rutin dilaksanakan di Department of English, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences tepatnya di gedung Reavis Hall (Gambar 3.9) Ruangan 215. Gedung tersebut terletak tidak jauh dari perpustakaan pusat NIU, Founders Memorial Library.

and Sciences,
Reavis Hall (tampak depan)

Sedangkan waktu pelaksanaan mentoring artikel ilmiah dilaksanakan setiap hari Senin dari jam 4 sampai dengan jam 5.30 sore, namun beberapa kesempatan dilaksanakan pada hari Kamis karena menyesuaikan perubahan jadwal mentor atas aktivitas akademik beliau di NIU. Di dalam proses mentoring, penulis mempelajari banyak hal dalam konteks penelitian dan penulisan jurnal ilmiah internasional bereputasi, khususnya pada sesi metode penelitian.

b. Academic Writing Class

Selain mentoring, penulis juga mengikuti perkuliahan writing class for publication bersama Dr. Paul M. Wright. Beliau saat itu menjabat sebagai Presidential Engagement Professor pada College of Education di Northern Illinois University. Adapun tujuan dari kegiatan tersebut adalah untuk penguatan kapasitas dan kompetensi peserta PKPI dalam menulis dan mencari journal international yang bereputasi.

e. Studi Kepustakaan

Dalam kegiatan ini, penulis melakukan studi kepustakaan di perpustakaan NIU baik secara online maupun secara langsung tentang artikel dan referensi yang mendukung penulisan draft artikel. Di Perpustakaan, Founders Memorial Library penulis menggunakan berbagai fasilitas untuk kepentingan penelitian. Perpustakaan tersebut merupakan sebuah perpustakaan yang sangat lengkap dan bila ada buku, artikel atau jurnal yang tidak terdapat di perpustakaan NIU, mahasiswa dapat mengakses perpustakaan perguruan tinggi lain melalui link yang disiapkan oleh kampus.

f. Pengabdian Kepada Masyarakat (Social Services)

Seperti di Indonesia, program pengabdian kepada masyarakat di NIU juga merupakan kegiatan yang tidak terpisahkan setelah pengajaran dan penelitian. Penulis dan peserta PKPI 2019 lainnya diberi kesempatan untuk melaksanakan kegiatan pengabdian kepada masyarakat yang diadakan oleh Holmes Centre pada program Feed My Starving Children Mobile Pack Event di The Suter Company, Sycamore, Illinois, USA.

Gambar 3.14 Kegiatan penulis dalam pengabdian pada masyarakat di The Suter Company, Sycamore, Illinois, USA

Gambar 3.15 Penulis saat packing makanan pada kegiatan pengabdian pada masyarakat di The Suter Company, Sycamore, Illinois, USA

Program ini merupakan kegiatan yang diadakan setiap tahun yang melibatkan seluruh mahasiswa tidak terkecuali mahasiswa internasional. Program ini merupakan bentuk tanggung jawab kampus NIU kepada masyarakat khususnya DeKalb, Illinois.

3.3 Tahap Akhir Kegiatan

Tahap akhir kegiatan ini meliputi tiga kegiatan yang harus penulis laksanakan. Pertama, presentasi akhir pada kegiatan penutupan PKPI 2019 di NIU, kedua, laporan kegiatan dan laporan keuangan atas kontrak beasiswa tahun anggaran 2019 ke Dikti dan terakhir seminar hasil kegiatan PKPI/Sandwich-like yang akan diselenggarakan oleh Direktorat Jenderal Pendidikan Tinggi.

Pertama, penulis dan peserta PKPI 2019 lainnya berkewajiban mempresentasikan laporan hasil draft paper/manuskript artikel jurnal internasional yang telah didiskusikan dengan mentor maupun dosen writing class. Kegiatan ini dilaksanakan sebelum acara penutupan kegiatan PKPI (Closing ceremony of PKPI 2019). Pada acara penutupan kegiatan PKPI pada akhir program tersebut dihadiri oleh para mentor, seluruh peserta PKPI 2019, staf CSEAS, mahasiswa Indonesia yang studi di NIU, Perwakilan dari KBRI dan staf International Office. Kegiatan ini dilaksanakan pada hari Selasa tanggal 5 Desember 2019 Pukul 13.30- 17.00.

Gambar 3.17 Penulis menerima sertifikat dari Direktur CSEAS, Dr. Eric Jones

Kedua, sesampai di Indonesia peserta PKPI 2019 melaporkan diri kembali untuk kepulangan dengan menyerahkan SPPD yang sudah disahkan perwakilan resmi pemerintah RI beserta boarding pass asli dan fotokopy tiket pesawat yang telah digunakan. Setelah itu, penulis dan peserta lainnya menyampaikan laporan kegiatan dan laporan keuangan atas kontrak beasiswa tahun anggaran 2019 yang telah ditandatangani antara penerima program dengan Direktorat Jenderal Sumber Daya Iptek dan Dikti. Laporan tersebut diunggah ke laman <http://pak.ristekdikti.go.id/forum> tanggal 17 Februari 2020.

Terakhir, peserta PKPI mempresentasikan artikel yang telah dihasilkan selama program berlangsung pada acara seminar hasil kegiatan PKPI/Sandwich-like yang akan diselenggarakan oleh Direktorat Jenderal Pendidikan Tinggi sekitar bulan Maret 2020.

BAB IV

PENUTUP

4.1 Kesimpulan

Program Peningkatan Kualitas Publikasi Internasional (PKPI)/ Sandwich-like 2019 ini sangat membantu penulis dalam menambah wawasan internasional, terutama dalam hal penulisan draft manuskrip. Sesuai dengan tujuan utama dari pelaksanaan program ini, yaitu membantu peserta dalam meningkatkan kualitas artikel yang relevan dengan bidang kajiannya sehingga layak untuk dikirim ke jurnal internasional bereputasi di luar negeri. Adapun artikel yang telah dihasilkan berjudul “Let’s take a look...”: an investigation of directives as negotiating interpersonal meaning in science lecture”. Artikel tersebut telah dikirimkan ke Jurnal Internasional bereputasi dan terindeks Scopus (Q2).

Disamping luaran utama tersebut, penulis juga mendapatkan penguatan dari mentor dalam hal kerangka teori, metode penelitian, baik dalam metode dan teknik pengambilan data, analisis data maupun penyajian data. Hal ini tentunya sangat membantu penulis dalam memperdalam bagian – bagian bab yang ada pada disertasi yang sedang dikerjakan. Disisi lain, kegiatan beasiswa PKPI 2019 ini juga membangun jaringan (networking) dalam hal kerjasama penelitian yang dapat digunakan selama penyelesaian disertasi dan setelah menyelesaikan kuliah S3. Kemudian, penulis juga mendapatkan sumber - sumber literatur terkini baik buku -buku teks maupun jurnal-jurnal terbaru yang dapat digunakan dalam keperluan penulisan artikel ilmiah maupun naskah disertasi. Terakhir, Pengalaman emperik dalam kehidupan akademik kampus di luar negeri juga sangat dirasakan positif oleh penulis saat mengikuti kelas (sit in) di kelas mentor.

Terakhir, ini dapat disimpulkan bahwa peningkatan kualitas dosen Indonesia dalam publikasi jurnal internasional melalui program pencangkokan/magang ke beberapa pembimbing bertaraf internasional dinilai sudah sangat tepat. Untuk itu diharapkan program beasiswa PKPI/Sandwich-like ini ke depan bisa terus diadakan dan dikembangkan dengan jaringan yang lebih luas lagi. Sehingga, Indonesia akan melahirkan sumberdaya manusia (SDM) Indonesia yang berkualitas dan memiliki daya saing internasional.

4.2 Saran

Berdasarkan pengalaman penulis dan peserta program PKPI/Sandwich-like 2019 di NIU, secara keseluruhan pelaksanaan program beasiswa PKPI 2019 telah berjalan dengan sangat baik. Namun, ada beberapa hal yang perlu diperbaiki dan ditingkatkan sehingga pelaksanaan di tahun berikutnya akan lebih baik. Adapun, saran untuk pelaksanaan program beasiswa PKPI/Sandwich-like berikutnya adalah sebagai berikut:

- a. Pengorganisasian jadwal kegiatan yang lebih terencana sehingga kepastian keberangkatan peserta serta lamanya program bisa lebih dipastikan. Contoh sederhana dalam konteks ini adalah waktu keberangkatan. Berdasarkan jadwal kegiatan pada buku panduan, waktu keberangkatan yakni di bulan Agustus. Namun, keberangkatan penulis dan peserta lainnya sampai di pertengahan bulan Oktober.
- b. Pencairan beasiswa program PKPI jika memungkinkan bisa dilaksanakan sebelum keberangkatan sehingga peserta lebih merasa aman dan nyaman dalam melaksanakan program.
- c. Sosialisasi program PKPI agar lebih merata agar calon peserta memiliki waktu yang lebih banyak untuk dapat mempersiapkan persyaratan –persyaratan. Komunikasi dengan Universitas pengelola sekolah paskasarjana juga dilihat sangat penting sebab selama ini informasi mengenai program ini belum terdistribusi dengan baik kepada mahasiswa S3, khususnya dosen yang sedang menjalankan tugas belajar. Harapannya, akan lebih banyak dosen yang sedang belajar mendapatkan kesempatan untuk mengikuti program PKPI tersebut.
- d. Mengingat pentingnya kegiatan ini, perlu dilanjutkan di tahun-tahun berikutnya untuk lebih meningkatkan kualitas publikasi bagi dosen yang sedang menempuh studi S3.

ABSTRACT

The aim of this study is to investigate the use and function of directives with command and question speech function as a dimension of interpersonal realization in science lectures. Question and command speech functions in lectures of the Aerospace Engineering Department at the Delft University of Technology in The Netherlands were considered. A chiefly qualitative content analysis of negotiating interpersonal meaning in four content lessons was carried out. The findings showed that science lecturers employed various types of directives. In terms of commands, they used imperative moods, declarative moods, and modulated interrogatives. In addition, for questions, the lecturers used interrogative and declarative mood. However, a modulated declarative was not found. Some implications were also investigated. The lecturers used commands to express their attitudes, to organize their messages, to check students' understanding, and to signal the contents of the exam. Meanwhile, in terms of the question, they function to elicit students' background knowledge, to check on student's comprehension, and to handle classroom management issues. The results of this study can also be used as a platform by stakeholders to enhance foreign language learning in the science classroom context.

Keywords: command, question, negotiating interpersonal meaning, systemic functional linguistics, science lecture

INTRODUCTION

Linguists have become increasingly interested in the realization of interpersonal meaning as an expression of opinions and attitudes. While much research has been done on interpersonal meaning (Blum-Kulka & Olshtain, 1989; Goatly, 1995; Dalton-Puffer, 2005; Andriani, 2011; Waring & Hruska, 2012; Sunardi et al, 2018), there is only recently work being done in analyzing various context of language use.

This article explores the speech function of questions and commands as a dimension of interpersonal realization in the classroom where English is used as the medium of instruction (EMI). This study is motivated by two linguistic phenomena. First, both questions and commands are linguistic aspects of interactive lecture discourse that can improve and enhance communicative competence on behalf of students than another speech function. The interactive lectures were found to be characterized by a greater amount of personal pronouns, elicitation markers, display, and referential questions, as well as the presence of negotiation of meaning (Morell, 2004). Second, questions and commands have both textual and interpersonal functions. Morell (2004:328) states that they are textual because they act as referential, cohesive, and organizing devices, and at the same time, they are interpersonal because they are concerned with the lecturer's stance towards the content and the students. It is furthermore integral to lecturers' pedagogical repertoire, and their efficacy crucial to optimizing learning outcomes (Waring & Hruska, 2012).

In this study, the main focus is the interactive discourse that occurs in lectures for students taking a degree in Aerospace Engineering conducted in English at the Delft University of Technology, Netherlands. As Crystal (2013) in Björkman (2018) points out, English has established for itself a solid place as the dominant lingua franca of science through which most academic and scientific activity takes place. In addition, English is pre-eminent and has become the main foreign language that is used as a means of instruction at universities in Europe and worldwide (Soruc & Griffith, 2017). Yet, in terms of teaching and learning through English, there are two predictable problems: inadequate language skills and the need for training of indigenous staff and students and inadequate proficiency of incoming international students in the host language (Coleman, James, 2006). Dearden (2014) reports that a lack of resources, the changing role of lectures, and a standard level of EMI teachers are still problematic. Lebauer (1984) notes a problem common many students in advanced listening comprehension and note-taking classes is that, in spite of apparent fluency, they still have difficulties understanding the points made in lectures (Olsen & Huckin, 1990).

Negotiating discourse meanings has widely been advocated as a significant means of building talk or dialogue with students in academic settings. According to Xuan & Huang (2017), investigation of interpersonal linguistic resources is of great importance as part of understanding learning in general and language development in particular (eg., Blum-Kulka & Olshtain, 1989; Goatly, 1995; Dalton-Puffer, 2005 Andriani, 2011; Sunardi et al, 2018). Nevertheless, surprisingly little is known about the verbal cues that are indicative of negotiating interpersonal meaning. In an attempt to shed more light on this issue, the present study investigates the use and functions of questions and commands as a dimension of interpersonal realization in the classroom where a foreign language is being used as the medium of instruction. This study also proposes an alternative classification of mood structures realized in the lecturers' utterances.

Thus, the present study, in an attempt to fill a gap in the literature, seeks to examine the following research questions:

1. How are commands and questions speech functions realized in different grammatical moods in science lectures?
2. How do commands and questions enhance negotiating interpersonal meaning in science lectures?

A FRAMEWORK FOR ANALYSIS

This section elaborates concepts of mood and speech function, speech role and commodities in interaction, and negotiation of interpersonal meaning. In doing so, we adapt categories from systemic functional linguistics and evaluate their effectiveness in understanding the role and function of directives in spoken academic lecture discourse.

MOOD AND SPEECH FUNCTION: BASIC RESOURCE FOR NEGOTIATION

The grammatical system of mood and the relationship between the different moods and the basic speech function categories are interwoven. The four basic move types—statement, question, offer, and command—(Eggins, 2004) group offers and commands together as proposals, with statements and question grouped as propositions (Halliday, 1985; Martin, 1992; Martin, Matthiessen, and Painter, 1997), as presented in Table 1.

TABLE 1. Samples of types of speech function (Halliday, 1985; Martin, 1992; Martin, Matthiessen, and Painter, 1997; Eggins, 2004)

Proposals
a) Offer	Can I get you a drink?
b) Command	Get me a drink, would you? Propositions
a) Statement	There's lots of beer.
b) Question	Is there any Tooheys?

Proposal is defined as the semantic function of a clause which is used to exchange of goods & services. Meanwhile, when language is used to exchange information, the clause takes on the form of a proposition.

SPEECH ROLE AND COMMODITIES IN INTERACTION

Halliday (1994) notes two fundamental types of speech role: giving and demanding. Fundamentally, this distinction means that the speaker or writer either gives something to the listener or reader or demands something from him or her. It should be noted that giving and demanding more discreetly mean “inviting to receive” and “inviting to give” respectively. In this way, the act of speech is an interaction that requires, in a commodities sense, exchange of information.

TABLE 2. Speech role and commodities in interaction (Halliday, 1994; Thompson, 2013)

Commodity Exchanged
Speech Role	Information	Goods and Services
a) Giving	Statement ‘We’re nearly there’	Offer ‘I’ll show you the way’
b) Demanding	Question ‘Is this the place?’	Command ‘Give me your hand’

As seen in table 2, “a statement is any stretch of language that functions to give information to the addressee; a question is any stretch that functions to elicit information from the addressee; a command is any stretch whose intended function is to influence the behaviour of the addressee in some way; and an offer is any stretch whose function is to initiate or accompany the giving of goods-&-services to the addressee” (Thompson, 2014, p 47). Thomson further states that “three of these basic functions are closely associated with particular grammatical structures: statements are most naturally expressed by declarative clauses; questions by interrogative clauses; and commands by imperative clauses” (p. 48).

NEGOTIATING INTERPERSONAL MEANING

A theoretical framework that combines speech function and mood system (Ervin-Tripp, 1976; Eggins, 1994, 2004; Dalton-Puffer, 2005; Halliday, 1985, 1994, 2014; Iedema, 1997; Lock, 1996) guides this study. A considerable amount of empirical work regarding a variety of speech function and mood systems has been based on the systemic functional linguistics approach (SFL) developed by Halliday's (1985; 2004; 2014). SFL views language as a social- semiotic system, i.e., a meaning-making process which includes experiential (ideational), interpersonal and textual meanings (Halliday and Matthieseen, 2014). Based on Bloor & Bloor (2004), these three types of meaning are referred to as metafunctions. They note that language is used to organize, understand and express our perceptions of the world and of our own consciousness. This is known as the ideational metafunction. Language is also used to enable us to participate in communicative acts with other people, to take on roles and to express and understand feelings, attitudes, and judgments. This metafunction is known as the interpersonal metafunction. The last, language is used to relate what is said (or written) to the rest of the text and to other linguistic events. This involves the use of language to organize the text itself. This is known as the textual metafunction.

In addition to interpersonal metafunction, Lock (1996) & Fontaine (2013) argued that interpersonal meaning is the meanings created from the speaker's personal 'intrusion' on the language situation and how the speaker uses language to interact with others. This involves the means by which the speaker's personal views are expressed, such as degrees of doubt, certainty, ability or obligation. Furthermore, these more personal meanings, speakers also express meanings that involve interaction more explicitly, such as asking questions, giving instructions or providing information. Besides, interpersonal meaning explores how the clauses structured so that we can use them to challenge, assert, agree, contradict, offer, refuse, etc (Eggins, 2004). She added that whenever we use language to interact, one of the things we are doing with it is establishing a relationship between us: between the person speaking now and the person who will probably speak next.

LITERATURE REVIEW

PREVIOUS STUDIES ON DIRECTIVES IN THE CLASSROOM

An early study by Dalton-Puffer (2005) initially explored directives as a dimension of interpersonal discourse management in classrooms where a foreign language is being used as the medium of instruction. She offered ethnographic studies using inter-language and intercultural pragmatics. In her study, she applied a qualitative analysis of directive speech acts in six content lessons in Austrian upper secondary schools. The result of this study is shown that "requests in the content and language integrated learning (CLIL) classrooms are characterized by a clear division along the lines of request goal and the directives in these CLIL classrooms show a far greater linguistic variety than anticipated" (p.16).

In another study, Andriany (2011) examined the interpersonal utterances in English as a Foreign Language (EFL) classroom in Medan, Indonesia. In her study, she attempted to describe the form of mood system, mood structure, modality and interpretation of social context in classroom discourse. Her analysis was conducted by studying the text according to the lexicogrammatical units that realize the interpersonal utterances by using Halliday's (1985, 1994, 2004) approach of systemic functional linguistics. She also used Martin (1992) and Eggins (1994, 2004) framework to look at closely the relationship between text and genre. Andriany (2011) pointed out that the representation of interpersonal meaning lexicogrammatical in the studied text by clause system focus indicates that the using of mood structure on each text that realized either by teachers or the students. Indicative-declarative mood is used as a consequence of the function of the teacher as the giver of information or knowledge to the information that related to any knowledge aspect especially the Indonesian language can be accepted by the student. Then, the imperative mood is used to establish the motivation and encourage the students to do anything that causes their readiness to begin the action or deed in achieving a certain goal. The last, the results show in the social context found that the issue of the status shows the inequality status among the parties (teacher-student).

Another study that also looks specifically at directives is that Waring & Hruska (2012). They examined the specific ways in which certain practices of directives can incur difficulty in student understanding and thereby hinder student participation and diminish learning opportunities. Data come from a videotaped tutoring session collected at an after-school early literacy program for kindergarten through second grade English to speakers of other languages (ESOL) students. Methodologically, they tried to synthesize some approaches such as pragmatics, sociolinguistics and some approaches to discourse analysis. Further, conversation analysis (CA) framework and ethnographic details were applied to contextualize, elaborate, and enrich the CA analysis. In their findings, they proposed a further contribution to the existing work on directives as well as that on teacher practices in pedagogical interactions.

In subsequent work, Sunardi et al, (2018) investigated lexico-grammatical realizations of interpersonal meaning in English as a foreign language (EFL) classroom in the Indonesian university context. In this study, video-taped English lectures taken from three English departments in some Indonesian universities were applied. Their findings suggested that interpersonally, the clauses used in the EFL classrooms are predominated by declarative clause, interrogative clause, and imperative clause. The predominance of the declarative clause is influenced by the teacher-centered teaching method used in the classrooms. Besides, the interrogative clause is also used by lecturer to know the students' understanding of the learning materials. Finally, the imperative clause is also used to ask students to do something relating to the understanding of the learning materials.

Based on the studies above, there are three important points which indicate first, the realization of speech functions are considered based on the goal of the learning process. Second, applying the knowledge of interpersonal meaning is really useful for language teaching and learning in the classroom. The last, pragmatic issues of status and power are in focus as the students talk about the ways their lecturers or teachers give commands and the force of those commands. The study of negotiating interpersonal meaning which looks specifically at directives (Dalton-Puffer, 2005; Waring & Hruska, 2012) has been conducted as well. However, studies dealing with the analysis of negotiating interpersonal meaning in the classroom specifically directives using systemic functional linguistics approach are hardly discovered. Concerning the importance of the directive as negotiating interpersonal meaning in the classroom, further the present study is needed.

DIRECTIVES: QUESTION AND COMMAND

This study focuses on the realization of interpersonal meaning through the speech functions of directives-question and command. Based on Searle (1976) in Waring & Hruska (2012), directives are defined as an attempt by the speaker to get the hearer to do something, such as questioning, inviting, suggesting, requesting, advising, and the like. The directive is a linguistic construction of authority where background of information such as power is considered. It is in line with Dalton-Puffer (2005). He stated that power, distance, and imposition are the speaker's judgment that they use as the appropriate strategy of speech function. Furthermore, if we wish to make a command, we will use an imperative. Directives are concerned with organizing action in social institutions. Directives contain the obligatory command, i.e. the request for action, and perhaps background information, as well as reasons (Iedema, 1997). Then, if we wish to offer something, we are likely to use a 'would like' interrogative (what we call a modulated interrogative). Furthermore, in the interrogatives, we can see the opposite movement of information; the interlocutor expects to receive an answer (yes/no, at nine o'clock, or at school) from a listener or reader. This shows that the former is a recipient of information, and the latter is a (potential) provider of information. Finally, in the imperatives, the interlocutor demands the information (or goods & services, according to Halliday (White, 2000, p.7) to a listener or reader; the former is a recipient of information, and the latter is a provider of information or service, as in the case of the interrogatives.

Eggins (2004) developed a typical and non-typical mood in clauses. She proposed some possibilities, for example, not all demands for goods and services have to be imperatives. The possibilities for both marked and unmarked correlations are considered. Commands are typically expressed by imperative clauses (Read Henry James) but they can also be expressed by declarative (I'm hoping you'll read some Henry James), or modulated interrogatives (would you mind reading Henry James, please?). While questions are usually expressed by interrogatives (is the Bostonians' by Henry James?), they can also be expressed by modulated declarative (I was wondering whether 'The Bostonians' might be by Henry James' last novel). Questions, statements, directives, and offers are basic categories of speech acts. Meanwhile, Lock (1996), in his findings, urges that the category of directives includes order, prohibition, suggestions, permissions, and request. Yet, some linguists (Halliday, 1994; Eggins, 2004; Schleppegrell, 2013, & Thompson, 2013) use different terms. In term of command, Lock uses directives and he differentiates between questions and directives.

In analyzing the directive question and command occurring in the science lecture, this study largely uses the framework rooted in Halliday (1985; 1994; 2014)'s theory, developed by (Ervin-Tripp, 1976; Eggins, 1994, 2004; Iedema, 1997; Dalton-Puffer, 2005; Thompson, 2013; Martin, 1992). As Table 3 shows, the matrix of negotiating interpersonal meaning in English directive: commands and questions used in this study is elaborated.

TABLE 3. Matrix of English Directives: Command & Question (Halliday, 1985, 1994, 2014; Ervin-Tripp, 1976; Lock, 1996; Iedema, 1997; Eggins, 2004; Dalton-Puffer, 2005)

MOOD SYSTEM IN ENGLISH: STRUCTURAL PERSPECTIVE

The interpersonal meaning accounts for a different set of meanings which focus on speakers' and listeners' interactions with each other and with the material being conveyed in terms of attitudes and stances expressed in the discourse. As Eggins (2004) cited in Simpson (2011) "the realizations of these meanings occur in terms of mood choices: statement, question, command; and modality realized by modal operators such as 'might', 'could', 'and should'". They are also realized by adjuncts like 'probably', 'usually' or different sentence adjuncts which relate to the whole of the sentence; examples include 'frankly', 'unfortunately'. Halliday and Matthiessen (2014) classify English clauses as three basic types of interact, as illustrated in Figure 1.

The term Mood refers to the primary interpersonal system of clauses by considering the occurrence of functional Mood elements of the subject and finite in a clause (Martin & Matthiessen, 1997). Based on this system, a clause is considered to consist of two functional elements: Mood and Residue (Sujatna, 2013). The mood is the combination of functional constituents of Subject and Finite of a clause, while Residue is the combination of Predicator, Complement, and Adjunct of a clause.

In terms of the presence of Mood elements, a clause can be declarative, interrogative, or imperative. A declarative clause is a clause in which the Subject occurs before the Finite (Subject ^ Finite, where ^ means 'is followed by'). The following clause is an example of a declarative clause.

Declarative

Subject	Finite	Predicator	Complement	Adjunct
You	should	insulate	yourself	with a sleeve.... (Lock, 1996, p.178)

An interrogative clause is a clause in which the Finite precedes the Subject. There are two types of interrogative clauses: yes/no interrogative and WH-interrogative. The following clauses are examples of interrogative clauses.

Interrogative

Finite	Subject	Predicator	Complement	Adjunct
Did	They	Put	The books	in the boxes?
Wh-/complement	Finite	Subject	Predicator	Adjunct
When	Did	You	Come	here

(Lock, 1996, p.178)

The imperative clause is a clause that typically does not contain the elements of Subject or Finite but consists of only a Predicator, plus any of the non -core participants of Complement and Adjunct. The following is an example of an imperative clause.

Imperative

Predicator	Adjunct
Sit	On your bottom (Lock, 1996, p.179)

RESEARCH METHODS

RESEARCH DESIGN

Krippendorff's (2004) methodology of qualitative content analysis was used in this study. He defines content analysis as 'a research technique for making replicable and valid inferences from texts (or other meaningful matter) to the context of their use' (p.18). The present study used this method since it provided a systematic and objective means to make valid inference from verbal, visual, or written data in order to describe and quantify specific phenomena (Downe-Walbott, 1992). In analyzing the data, a latent analysis was required since identifying hidden meanings in text is needed. Further, there are three process of qualitative content analysis from planning to presentation (Bengtsson, 2016). They are planning, data collection, data analyzing and presenting of the result.

DATA COLLECTION

This investigation was based on the Cosmolearning freely available online (<https://cosmolearning.org>). Cosmolearning is a web platform collection of the educational videos from hundreds of universities, educators, and professionals. Four Aerospace engineering lecturers originating at the University of Delft in the Netherlands form the main resource for this study. These lecturers were chosen because of their scientific content and English was used as the medium of learning for subjects other than English as a foreign language. The lecturers in these videos are all fluent, though non-native, speakers of English, three males and one female. There are two limiting factors in the analysis that should be noted: (1) this study used only transcripts, focusing on analyses of grammatical structures, while recognizing that non-verbal, visual and prosodic clues also part of the complete lecture setting; (2) following Siepmann (2005) and as is typical for research on ready-made corpora, there was no triangulation of data. Thus, our account is based on the judgments of plausibility rather than certainty (Mann and Thompson, 1998, cited in Derooey, Katrien and Taverniers, Miriam, 2012). Table 4 shows a full description of these lectures used in this study.

TABLE 4. Description of lectures used in the current study

Transcripts Number (label)	Participants (initials)	Gender	Topic/title	Duration
L1_AeEn	JH	Male	Ballooning	1:26:13
L2_AeEn	JS	Male	How aircraft fly	1:34:59
L3_AeEn	HB	Female	Aerodynamic fundamentals	1:26:09
L4_AeEn	MV	Male	Flight Mechanics	1:28:19

The lectures were purposively selected under four criteria from Cosmolearning. They are the academic roles of the lecturer, the speech event type, the academic status of the students (audience), and interactivity (Lee, 2009). Qualitative research should purposefully select participants or sites both document and visual material that will best help the researcher understand the problem and research questions (Creswell, 2009). Meanwhile, for research setting, Netherlands was chosen for this study based on two criteria: best global universities for Engineering in Netherlands (www.usnews.com) and first rank of English language skills (<https://www.ef.edu/epi/>).

Regarding the criteria for selected data, the video recording lectures were collected from <https://cosmolearning.org> and distributed across four broad themes: Ballooning, How aircraft fly, Aerodynamic 1: fundamentals, and Flight mechanics. At the time of the study, Mr. JH taught aircraft basic. The video lecture was accessed from <https://cosmolearning.org/video-lectures/introduction-aero-eng-ballooning/>. Mr. JS taught aircraft basic. The video lecture was downloaded from <https://cosmolearning.org/video-lectures/how-airplanes-fly/>. Then, Mrs. HB taught aerodynamic. The video recorded lesson was downloaded from <https://cosmolearning.org/video-lectures/aerodynamics-1-fundamentals/>. The last, Mr. MV taught flight mechanics. It was accessed and downloaded from <https://cosmolearning.org/video-lectures/flight-mechanics-1-introduction/>.

All four video - recorded lessons were firstly transcribed verbatim manually. After that, transcribed into text format using YouTube auto-transcribe service. They were a feature owned by YouTube known as Auto Transcribe. The decision was made to use this feature because it provides highly accurate and quality transcription (Adrina, 2019).

DATA ANALYSIS

Data analyzing procedure in this present study was undertaken in four steps: (1) decontextualization, (2) recontextualization, (3) categorization, and (4) compilation. Figure 2 shows the process of data analysis.

In the decontextualization stage, we began by downloading each of the video recordings from Cosmolearning.org. Next we transcribed the video manually. In order to get a reliable data, then the present writers retrieved the video transcription from YouTube auto-transcribe service. After that we comprehended the results both manual and auto transcriptions. Before the transcription was condensed into smaller meaning units, we read through the transcribed text to obtain the sense of the whole. Next, we identified the relevant meaning units and then coded each of these using an open coding procedure. A sample of coding scheme of transcribed text data is illustrated in Table 5.

TABLE 5. Sample coding of transcribed text data

Data No.	Meaning Unit (Utterances)	Condensed meaning unit (Clauses)	Category	Coding
Im_03/I	So let's change this formula! We know that the air density is by mass divided by volume, which means that the volume is mass divided by density	Let's change this formula	Command	Use imperative (typical clause)

After open-coding the data was done, we then classified or categorized the similar characteristics of data. The transcribed utterances were divided into clauses from which the negotiating interpersonal meaning of directives – questions and commands were identified and classified based on mood system as suggested in Halliday (1998; 1994), Eggeris (2004), and Lock (1996).

The second stage is contextualization. In this stage, we reread the original text alongside the final list of meaning units to check whether all aspects of the content have been covered in relation to the research questions. Then we considered the unmarked text whether or not the unmarked text should be included. The third stage is categorization. In this stage, we identified themes and categories which rooted in the data from which they arise. And the last was compilation. In this stage, we presented a summary of theme, categories or sub-themes as a table to allow the reader overview the results easily (Bengtsson, 2016). Table 6 presents the example of data presentation.

FINDINGS AND DISCUSSION

In this section, we present the results of our analysis of the speech functions of commands and questions in the four science lectures studies. We examine these relative to the various grammatical moods they typify and dimensions of interpersonal interaction in the science classroom.

Table 7 presents the different categories of command and question functions found in the data relative to various grammatical moods. Commands in these science lectures were found to be done through imperative mood, interrogative mood and declarative mood. The function of each sub-mood types is also presented in this table. A detailed discussion of grammatical moods and functions with examples from the corpus follows in the next sections.

COMMAND SPEECH FUNCTIONS

This section not only presents the function and categories of command but also the grammatical moods in science lecturers. The grammatical mood explains how the clauses are structured to enable us to express interpersonal meaning such as challenge, agree, assert, refuse etc. The discussion also tries to uncover the relationship between the semantic organization and grammatical differences in the mood structure of clauses. Then, we identify the functional constituents and their configurations in clauses of different mood types. As it is explained in the previous section, there are two constituents that is established in interpersonal meaning. They are MOOD and RESIDUE. MOOD defines as the primary interpersonal system of clauses by considering the occurrence of functional Mood elements of the subject and finite in a clause. Meanwhile, the RESIDUE is merely what is 'left over' once the Mood has been established. RESIDUE is the combination of Predicator, Complement, and Adjunct of a clause.

IMPERATIVE MOOD

The use of imperative in the classroom is influenced by the role relationships between lecturer and students. As the center of the teaching-learning activities, the lecturer is responsible for students' understanding of the learning materials. In this context, the lecturer is entitled to ask students to do something in relation to understanding the learning materials. These roles are consistent with Lock's descriptions (1996). In many contexts, directives expressed by imperative mood function as commands or orders which the speaker expects to be obeyed. We found that the science lecturers used imperative moods for (1) advice, (2) warning, and (3) instruction. As illustrated in Table 6.

TABLE 8. Imperative mood used in science lectures

	MOOD			RESIDUE
Function	Subject	Finite	Predicator	Complement	Adjunct
Advice			Remember	that!
Warning		Don't	study	It	too intensively: circumstantial
Instruction	Let's		go		to the first force: circumstantial

Advice

The lecturers made commands using the imperative mood consisting of only a RESIDUE or no MOOD element at all. As is typical for the imperative, the subject is not specified since it can only be the addressee ('you'). The lecturers used mood types that function as advice using the element of RESIDUE only. For example, in Excerpt 1, the lecturer attempts a demand intended to influence student behavior.

Excerpt 1

- (1) Remember that! we said that the pressure inside and outside is approximately the same (Im_15/I)

In this case, the lecturers and students are discussing pressure which previously has been explained. The lecturer then directly orders students to review, referring to the earlier lesson, thereby making a connection between the current activity and a specific previous lesson. As Lee (2016) reports such a strategy is important because students will be more confident in performing activities with which they are similar. In addition, by making intertextual links between the current activity and a specific classroom event in the past, lecturers further maintain the notion of course continuity.

Warning

In implementing an imperative mood, science lecturers also used it as a warning. This imperative consists of a finite negative MOOD element only, also with no overt subject illustrated in Excerpt 2.

Excerpt 2

- (2) We can also ask about this but don't study it too intensively. Don't don't study it for all the older dates and so on (Im_1/II)

In this discussion of the history of aircraft, the command not to study "too intensively" comes as a response to a student's question. The goals of this lecturer's command are predominantly facts concerning content, while the questions asked by students are concerned mostly with exams. Thus, it is natural for the lecturer to use this Mood system since he is in control of the classroom.

Instruction

This kind of mood type was the most frequently used by the science lecturers. In Excerpt 3, the science lecturers orders the students, using mood let's. The subject is not 'you' but 'you and me'. Halliday and Matthiessen (2014, p. 166) argue that 'let's' itself 'is best interpreted as a wayward form of the Subject'.

Excerpt 3

- (3) Let's go to the first force! I first I would like to talk about the lift, the lift over aircraft.
 (Im_24/II)

In excerpt 3, the lecturer and students discuss three main components of force- the empty weights that structure all systems, such as lift, drag, and thrust. In this context, the lecturer tells students they will discuss these components one at a time. It implied that besides the clause is structured to enable to express the speaker's opinion and attitudes; clauses also could be organized as a message. It is in line with Morell's (2004) findings. She found that a command can function as both textual and interpersonal.

DECLARATIVE MOOD

As mentioned earlier, demands for goods and services are typically (but by no means always) realized by imperatives (Eggins, 2004). It can be also realized by declarative. The findings demonstrate that the lecturers used it as (1) obligation, and (2) necessity.

TABLE 9. Declarative mood used in science lectures

	MOOD					RESIDUE
Function	Conjunctive adjunct	Subject	Mood adjunct	Finite	Predicator	Complement	Adjunct
Obligation	So	You		have to	understand	all the forces that can act	on the aircraft
Necessity		You	really	should	Remember	it	also for the exam

Obligation

The findings show that the lectures used declarative mood as an obligation. As Ervin- Tripp (1976) stated that any declarative or interrogative is to be interpreted as a command to do if it refers to an action or activity within the obligations of the addressee.

Excerpt 4

- (4) So, you have to be able to understand all the forces that act on the aircraft.
 (Dec_27/IV)

Excerpt 4 shows that Mr. MV explained about equations of motion of an aircraft. He then, told that before discussing equations of motion of an aircraft, students must understand all the forces first. In this context, Mr. MV obviously gave a command to students by realizing the proposal in the form of a modulated declarative mood clause Subject ^Finite. It can be most clearly seen in his utterances you have to. Moreover, for (Iedema, 1997), the obligation is realized incongruently as attribute 'important'. It implied that Mr. MV, in this context makes sure all students understand the topic given before she proceeds to the next discussion.

Besides obligation, in order to demand goods and services, the lecturer also used declarative mood as a necessity. It is indicated by using a modulated finite should in the following data.

Necessity

The goals of using a declarative with a modal finite expressing necessity are to order the addressee to do something, the speaker is putting forward an opinion about whether or not that something should be done (Butt et al, 2000). It is illustrated in the excerpt 5 below.

Excerpt 5

(5) You really should remember it also for the exam (Dec_15/III)

As the excerpt 5 above shows, Mrs. HB explained one of formula that is gas constant. In her explanation, she tried to highlight it using a gray color. Then, she signaled it as important information by associating it with the contents of the exam. Thus, Mrs. HB chose the declarative mood clause to realize the meaning. The modulated finite should then, was applied. It is indicated that she expressed meaning, not of probability but necessity (Eggins, 2004).

MODULATED INTERROGATIVE MOOD

The findings show that science lecturers not only used imperative mood and declarative mood but also modulated interrogative mood. It refers to types of mood used by the science lecturers in the classroom. In the following data, the lecturer ordered permission and action to the students by using modal finite Can and Could. In terms of ‘permission’, (Dalton-Puffer, 2005) followed Blum-Kulka et al (1989) to differentiate between actions, goods, permission, and information as types of request goals. Further, they mention research results which show that requests for action are most direct.

TABLE 10. Modulated Interrogative mood used in science lectures

Permission Directive

Excerpt 6

(6) Can I now just integrate and do something in general or not? (PerDir_1/III)
(7)

Excerpt (6) above shows the lecturer and students discussed pressure density and velocity. In this context, Mrs. HB demanded permission to the students to integrate and do something the material into the general. In this case, she used a modal finite Can. It is indicated conventionally indirect (speaker based conditions). Eggins (2005) stated that imperative is not only types of speech function that demands an action. The second type of modulated interrogative mood found was question directive. The following data shows how the science lecturer used the finite could to demand the actions.

Question Directive

Excerpt 7

- (8) Maybe could you please go to the service desk and ask for new batteries for my microphone please! (ModIn_1/I)

The excerpt 7 shows that Mr. JH demanded the student's action. He directed students to get some new batteries since, on his explanation, his microphone did not work. After a few minutes, the student returned back to the class & brought the new batteries. As Ervin-Tripp (1976) stated that the question directive gives listeners an out by explicitly stating some condition which would make compliance impossible. It shows that in this context, Mr. JH chose this kind of mood according to his judgment regarding power, distance, and imposition.

QUESTION SPEECH FUNCTION IN SCIENCE LECTURE

Question speech function refers to the types of grammatical mood used by science lecture in Cosmolearning corpus. In terms of question speech functions, the findings show that the science lectures used (1) interrogative mood, and (2) modulated declarative.

TABLE 11. Question speech function used in Science lectures

Polar/Yes/no Questions		Does that	make	sense?

INTERROGATIVE MOOD

Wh-Interrogative

Interrogative mood was the most frequent asked by science lecturers. In the following excerpt, the science lecturers asked the students WH-Question with finite do.

Excerpt 8

- (9) How many passengers do you think to travel annually by air? (Inter_1/I)

The excerpt 8 shows Mr. JH and students discussed transport aeronautics. To build or elicit students' background knowledge, he asked open referential questions with finite do and begun by adjunct circumstantial How many passengers. He posed the question to the entire class. It is in line with Lee's (2016) findings, as teachers attempt to activate student's knowledge; they invite them to jointly reconstruct this knowledge through a series of teacher-student exchanges. Further, Rido (2017), in his findings, stated that open referential question is not only to evaluate the students reading skills critically but also to elicit unknown information and get longer responses. For WH Interrogatives, the RESIDUE is split, coming in past prior to the MOOD and completing after the mood as in Table 9.

Polar Interrogative

The following excerpt shows how the science lectures posed ellipse questions (yes/no question) with adjunct polarity Yes, and complement question.

Excerpt 9

(10) Yes, Question? (Int_32/II)

Excerpt 10

(11) Does that make sense? (Int _36/II)

Excerpt 9 and 10 shows that Mr. JS asked students with ellipse questions yes, question? And yes/no question does that make sense? to check on student's comprehension. As Richards & Lockhart (1996) in Lee (2017) stated that they used it to handle classroom procedures and management issues rather than the lesson's content. Besides, it functions as 'punctuation' informing students that the instructions should be clear, so they should be ready to proceed. Asking a display question can identify how far students understand the material. It is also can monitor learning and encourage students to use the target language in the form of verbal responses (Rido, 2017).

DECLARATIVE MOOD

A question refers to any stretch that functions to elicit information from the addressee (Thompson, 2013). In other words, it is usually expressed by interrogative (Eggins, 2004). Typically, it has an ordering of the two elements of Finite^Subject. Eggins added that a question not only is expressed by interrogative but also can be expressed by modulated declarative. However, modulated declaratives were not found in this study.

The study revealed that interrogative moods can also be expressed by declarative mood. It is illustrated in the following data.

TABLE 12. Declarative mood used in science lectures

Function	MOOD	RESIDUE
	Subject Finite	complement
Question	There are	Three general principle

(12) There are three general principles (ModDec2/I)

As the excerpt (11) above shows, Mr. JH posted open referential to the entire class to ask how to generate lift. After that, a student answered incompletely. In his explanation, Mr. JH then, signaled the answer by uttering there are three general principles. As Eggins (2004) stated that it is categorized as a non-typical clause mood because as it is mentioned earlier, commonly question is expressed by Finite^Subject. Meanwhile, the findings show that it is formed in Subject ^ Finite.

CONCLUSION AND IMPLICATIONS

Using qualitative content analysis, this study is to investigate the use and function of directives with command and question speech function as a dimension of interpersonal realization in science lectures. This study reveals that science lecturers use various types of directives: command and questions. They involved a type of clause mood and non-typical clause mood. In term of command, the lecturers shared a large number of types of command which comprised imperative moods, declarative moods, and modulated interrogatives. Meanwhile, in term of the question, the lecturers used different types of mood clauses. These are interrogative mood and declarative mood. However, a modulated declarative was not found.

From the findings, some implications of choosing to make questions and commands speech functions in science lectures were also investigated. In terms of command, they seem to fulfill their function as not only to express opinion and attitudes but also to organize a message, to review earlier lesson, to make sure all students understand the topic given before they proceed to the next discussion, to signal an importance information relate to the contents of the exam, to use the judgment regarding power, distance, and imposition. Meanwhile, in terms of question, they function to build or elicit students background knowledge, to jointly reconstruct the knowledge through a series of teacher-student exchanges, not only to evaluate the students reading skills critically but also to elicit unknown information and get longer responses, to check on student's comprehension, and to handle classroom procedures and management issues rather than the lesson's content.

The results of this study are useful in many ways. First, this study can contribute a pedagogic discourse that can be realized in two sets of language choices: (a) regulative register, having to do with the goals, purposes, and directions of the teaching-learning activity and (b) instructional register, having to do with the "content" to be taught and learned. Second, the results of this study also can be used as a platform by stakeholders to enhance foreign language learning in the science classroom context.

This study has a few limitations that need to be addressed. The first limitation is the number of participants. The participants involves in this research only four lecturers. It means that the numbers are considered small. A future research might use a larger corpus such as BASE, COCA, BNC etc to get more comprehensive results. Second, this study focuses exclusively on the lecturers. There are many aspects that can be elaborated from students. Lastly, this study uses a standard orthography for transcription convention that suitable with the research objectives. However, further studies might consider including orthography with modification, or phonetic symbols. So that they could investigate another variable deeper both from lecturers'and students.
